While Supplies Last

Commodities Update:

- Panel Products: OSB has seen some minimal relief from the run-up of the last few months, and any additional price drops will most likely be small and short-lived. SYP plywood, likewise, is seeing price drops--some pretty substantial.
- Dimension Lumber: most all species are seeing some price drops, but nothing dramatic like the way they increased a few months back.
- Fiberglass Insulation has increased --more or less 5% and we will raise our prices early this month.
- Cellulose Insulation will see a 6% increase on June 5.
- Some steel stud manufacturers have announced a 5% increase for July 1. We'll have to wait and see if it happens.
- Our vinyl siding vendor, Georgia Pacific, will increase prices 6-8% effective June 3.

it is thinking of yourself less.*

Brain Builder: See if you can figure it out!

A mason has two empty containers, one a three gallon and the other a five gallon. How can he measure exactly one gallon of water for his mix, without wasting any water?

Words Worth Reading:

Although well-meaning, our indulgent practices have tended to encourage complacency among our pampered offspring. Many of us are accidental “helicopter parents”, hovering over our children, making sure they’re safe and protected, never bored, and on schedule. And it’s understandable. If a family has only one or two children growing up in a highly uncertain and competitive world, the parents naturally want to do everything possible to ensure that they succeed, particularly if all of the other parents appear to be doing the same thing.

If our kids are having a hard time in school, we call the teacher to make excuses, or we agitate until they receive special attention. Fortunately, some pockets of the culture at large have begun to wake up to the fact that our intrusions are often accidentally sapping our kids’ agency. In our desperate quest to ensure their educational and financial futures, we undermine both. Our actions reduce their initiative to buckle down and work harder at challenging subjects, because they know we’re standing beneath them, arms out and ready to catch them if they fall.
