Commodities Update:

- Panel products: OSB, has maintained its strength this month with prices inching up as mill order files expand. SYP plywood has finally caught hold of this movement and is also raising prices based on demand. This type of market will most likely last through this month at least.
- Dimension lumber: Our SPF lumber prices seem to be generating some upward momentum as mills push order files well into March. Increases have not been the nickel/dime variety-some pretty substantial. We may have already seen the lows for the next few months on SYP lumber (our Pressure Treated species) with weekly numbers increasing and expected increases yet to come.
- Our two main vendors for metal roofing/siding will be raising prices in the 5-6% range in early March. Our retails will correspondingly increase around that time also.
- In last months newsletter we reported that interior door units will be rising 15%-25% while that is what has been publicized, we have not seen that to be occurring with our primary vendors.

Words Worth Reading:

Ubuntu is a powerful Zulu word that means we don't exist on our own and that we are never alone because we are part of a bigger connected world of humanity. Before coming to South Africa, I lived in a society where being an individual was more valued than being part of a community. It's not like that here. In traditional Africa, 'us' is more meaningful than 'me'. Ubuntu means that I am who I am only because of who we all are together.
