Commodities Update:

- Clark Dietrich has announced steel stud price increases of 10% on both 2/1 and 3/1/21. This is now the 6th month in a row of 10% increases!
- Due to steel mill increases, we're seeing multiple rebar and concrete mesh increases. We've been advised that there will be further increases in the next few months.
- Some metal roofing manufacturers have announced 6-8% increases for 2/4/21. While we have not received increase notices from our two main vendors, they are most likely not far off.
- Pine mouldings has become a product that we are struggling to get enough stock. Between international surcharges imposed on China (of about 100%) and Covid concerns with other manufacturers and distributors, the supply is extremely restricted. It would be a good product to plan ahead for.
- Both dimension lumber and panel products remain very expensive with limited hope for a return to reason. We do remain somewhat optimistic that the next 6 weeks will bring some relief, but even if it does with light dealer and distributor inventories, the price may spike back up when buyers jump back in to the market.

Brain Builder:

The Prisoner's Hats:

Three prisoners are placed in a row so that the prisoner in the back can see the two in front of him, the prisoner in the middle can see the person in front of him and the prisoner in front can not see either of the other two. The guards tell the prisoners that they have 5 hats- 3 black and 2 white and they randomly place a hat on each prisoners head. The prisoners are then told if one of them can guess the color of their hat, without any incorrect guesses, they will all be set free. The prisoners obviously cannot see their own hat.

The guards ask the prisoner in the back of the line if he can figure out what his hat color is. He responds that he can not. They then ask the prisoner in the middle and he does not know either. When the guards ask the front prisoner what his hat color is, he answers correctly and all prisoners are freed. What color was the front prisoner's hat and how did he know?
