Commodities Update:

- General economy- Forecasters predict we won't see any significant growth in the construction sector until interest rates fall below 6%. The Federal Reserve has not moved rates down because of concerns over inflation-caused predominantly by potential tariff effects on the economy.
- Dimension lumber- SPF saw slight increases as of this writing (mid-June) but is still lingering on the low side of trading levels. With summer mill shutdowns approaching and countervailing duties to be imposed on Canadian lumber imports in August, the market won't remain at this low level for long. PT lumber is still awaiting its traditional uptick at this time of year. Lack of demand due to rain here in the East, among other factors, is contributing to this market situation.
- Panels- OSB remains a great deal. Prices are very low and while expected to turn back up, has not happened yet. SYP plywood, likewise, has seen single digit drops and would be a good purchase now for customers in need.
- Insulation products- Rockwool price increase 8-16% (our stock products will most likely be closer to 8%) effective 7/7/25.
- Roofing products: Most shingle manufacturers are either on controlled allocation or out 6-8 weeks on orders.
- Metal products- Clark Dietrich and other manufacturers will raise steel stud prices on 7/1/25. Increase percentage yet to be determined. With tariff concerns, rebar and mesh are starting to see small/medium increases. Fasteners- screws, structural fasteners, nails even metal hardware items like National Hardware products are increasing noticeably.

Quote to think about:

"You can't do good when you are gone.
Do what you can, when you can."

New inventory items:

Steel Pro brushed nickel "wave" style leversets- passage, privacy, entry

Insinkerator ¾"HP garbage disposer

Best Garden round point floral shovel

Words Worth Reading:

The America I have always loved is changing too. The threat of terrorism after September 11 has made our society less open. Revered precepts of due process are being reexamined. A growing divide is evident between the United States and longtime allies. The future relevance of the United Nations is being questioned. These trends should prompt not passive acceptance but vigorous debate. The welcome promised by the Statue of Liberty is very real to me, as it is to millions of American immigrants. The protections afforded by the Bill of Rights have stood for more than two centuries as our country's great gift to the world and its most powerful and productive force for change. The great institutions forged by the trans-Atlantic partnership that saved freedom in the twentieth century are in jeopardy. I believe firmly that they must be rescued and revitalized if that blessing is to survive the twenty-first.

Madelaine Albright (former Secretary of State) written in 2003 in her memoir Madame Secretary

Hardware Humor:

"He returned a sander."
